OZ 16 - The Magic Theatre

Description

The Magic Theatre refers to Hermann Hesse's novel Steppenwolf, "Entrance not for everybody. Price of admittance, your mind and 3 shillings". Robert Hughes, author of The Shock of the New, said of this issue, "Sharp has assembled one of the richest banks of images that has ever appeared in a magazine". The next issue of Oz described OZ 16 thus: "Sharp and Von Mora invite you to the Magic Theatre. Mixed media non copy. The worst selling most praised Oz ever".

SQUIRREL STOPS A VILLAGE FROM GOING TO THE LOO Madly lucid

By MIRROR REPORTER

CAREFULLY, a squirrel built up her winter store of nuts . . . and cut off a village from its loos.

The larder was in a switch box on top of a pole carrying electricity cables in the Elham Valley, near Folkestone, Kent.

The pile of nuts caused the box to short-circuit.

There was a blinding flash and the squirrel was electrocuted.

All the lights in the valley went out and an electric pump taking water to the hillside village of Rhodes Minnis stopped working.

Serious

For four and a half hours the village had no water . . . and no one could visit the loo.

But this bombast—aural and visual—cannot hide a fantastic virtuosity of guitar playing. The guitar speaks—unmistakably and unashamedly—of a pent-up violence and anger, felt by Hendrix's entire generation. Listen also to the stabbing, choking, breathless pounding of 'Magic Bus.' Stravinsky's Symphony in 3 Movements has got nothing on this—relentless, cursing, rhythmic, vicious, tight, fearful.

THIS MISTAKEN and UNHAPPY NOTION that a man is an enduring unity, man consists of a multitude of souls, of numerous selves. This seperation paves for madness. Science has invented the...

Colonel's daughter weds a hippy

THE COLONEL'S daughter plumped for a hippy wedding yesterday.

Caroline Barras, 19-year-old daughter of Colonel John Barras, Commanding Officer of Bovington Camp, Dorset, wore green shoes and a borrowed blue-spotted dress.

Bridegroom Barry Thompson, a corporation grass cutter, sported a giant, blue paper flower on a tattered jacket worn over a psychedelic shirt.

Anxious to be first in the queue for tickets for a concert by the Rolling Stones my friend and I left the house at 3 a.m. to make our way to the theatre.

We were stopped by a policeman who was to our disgust ignorant of what or who the Stones were. And so we settled ourselves on the steps of the theatre. Ten minutes later the policeman reappeared on a bicycle and drew from the saddlebag a vacuum flask of hot, steaming tea. It was lovely. And, by the way, we got our front row seats.—(Miss) ROSALIND BRADICK, Codgarden Avenue, Chingford.

3 pastors 'drive demons' out of screaming wife

Harry Davies (left), Malcolm Carr (centre) and TERRIFIED women called police to a hillside chapel yesterday where three pastors were "driving demons out of a possessed woman."

They claimed that the woman—wife of one of the pastors—had been dragged screaming into the chapel.

But last night the woman's husband, Pastor Harry Davies, said: "We believe she was possessed of evil spirits or demons, and we decided to cast them out by the power of prayer."

The exorcising ceremony took place at the House of Prayer in Treharris, Glamorgan. Mr. Davies was assisted by the chapel minister, Pastor Malcolm Carr, and Mr. Carr's brother, John, a minister from Dundee.

For months now a steady degeneration has been taking place on London's streets and public places. It has happened so gradually that it has gone almost unnoticed by those people who live and work in the city.

But it has come as a considerable shock to thousands of foreign visitors, who cannot believe that such sights can be tolerated in what was once a proud city.

The truth is that not only are they tolerated, but they are becoming more and more commonplace until they have reached the proportions of a national scandal.

If more mayors and police departments had the courage to crack down on those who carry only the flags of our enemies and newsmen who consistently slant their coverage of events in favor of those who would undermine and disrupt our country, there would be greater freedom for the majority of Americans rather than greater lawlessness for the few.

It is a tragedy that such individuals are allowed to cringe behind our constitutional guarantees after they have wreaked destruction by their agitation.

Who's afraid of Middle Age?

ROBERT LEE MASSIE, twenty-six, is the product of a broken home and has been a delinquent since the age of eight, finally resulting in the murder of a California housewife whom he was attempting to rob. He has been on Death Row at San Quentin for three years. But, unlike virtually all other condemned men, he adamantly claims his right to execution and has instructed his court-appointed attorneys to cease their appeals.

"I'm sick of the whole mess. Life never gave anything to me. It was always just drugs and alcohol and misery. And I never gave anything to life. I always knew it would end up like this—killing people. That's why I tried to join the Army. At least that way it would have been legal. But they didn't want me. Nobody ever has. So let's get it over with. All I have to say is, see you in the next world."

'Cured by Cannabis'

ACTOR Robin Anthony Culver wanted to protest against cannabis resin being designated a dangerous drug. So he walked into a police station with some in his hand, declared it was not a drug but a stimulant . . . and was promptly arrested.

At West London court yesterday he told magistrate Mr. E. R. Guest: "I was virtually an alcoholic. Cannabis has cured me of neurosis eroticism, depression and fits of violence.

"I believe that cannabis can be of positive benefit to mankind," he went on.

"The law of this country has to be obeyed," said Mr. Guest. "But I have no fear you will do yourself any harm."

He gave Culver, aged 26, of no fixed address, a two-year conditional discharge.

RED HORN, THE THIRD OF THIS SERIES OF HERO FIGURES, IS AN AMBIGUOUS PERSON, SAID TO BE THE YOUNGEST OF 10 BROTHERS

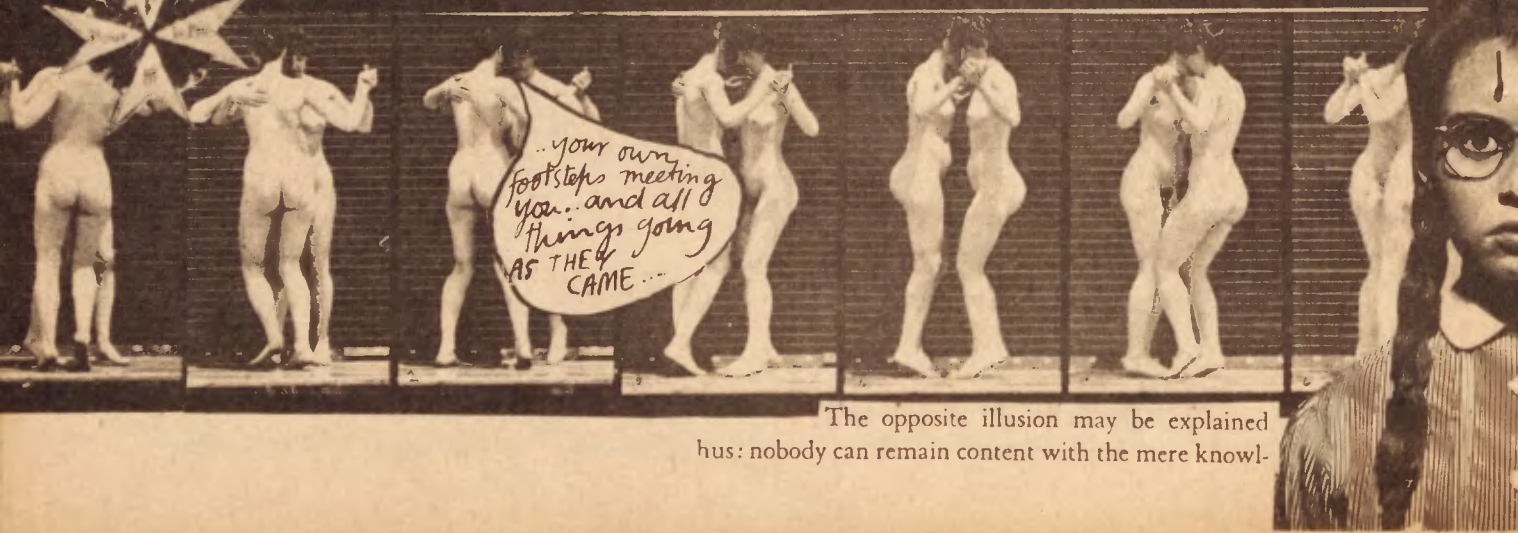

Mr. Paul Laurence Dunbar, having shown us that the educated negro can write most creditable English verse, offers a book of prose sketches of negro character and manners, called "Folks from Dixie" (Bowden). The sketches are of various qualities, but there is at least one masterpiece of humour among them—"Anner'Lizer." It is a tale of revival times, and it is difficult to say whether it is told out of sheer fun or in satire of the somewhat business-like tone that evidently is not absent from such exciting and emotional epochs. The heroine has the hardest possible task to "git 'ligion," though she is fervent and assiduous, and her credit in the meeting is at stake. There comes, between her and her goal a circumstance that can only shock the ungodly. It was a very amiable and very human circumstance. Her lover, her frivolous, light-hearted, coon-hunting lover, was her stumbling-block. So, like a woman really in earnest, she puts the case straight to him. "I prays an' I prays, an' jes' as I's begin to heah de cha'iot wheels a-rollin', yo' face comes right in 'tween an' drives it all away. Tell me now, Sam, so's to put me out or my 'spense, does you want to ma'y me, or is you goin' to ma'y Phiny? I jes' wants you to tell me, not dat I keers pussionally, but so's my min' kin be at res' spi'tually." Anner'Lizer got religion early next mornin', and Mr. Dunbar's simple talk of her struggle and triumph has won him the rank of a true humorist.

Dear Julia,
As you know I am not at all a jealous person,
I am not one of the people who think that an aged girl should talk to no other man but her cécé, but I must say I am quite at a loss to know how to take your recent conduct. Last night you scarcely took any notice of me whatsoever but reserved it all for young Higgins, who, as you must be perfectly aware, is a notorious flirt and altogether worthless. I could not help overhearing several people remarking on it. You can imagine what I felt like! Dear Julia, if you are repenting of our engagement you had much better tell me; on the other hand, if it is merely thoughtlessness on your part, I must tell you that you are trying me very much. I hope you will forgive my saying all this.

Ever your affectionate,

THE HEATHEN CHINESE.

When the time comes for China to be divided among the nations, a great slice of it, the middle slice, will naturally be placed under the beneficent rule of England; that is, the whole of the Yang-tzi Valley, possibly all the rich province of Szechuen, and a considerable chunk of the misty mountains of Yunnan, will belong to the Queen. I don't know whether the Chinaman will like it—indeed, I don't know if he very much cares. Last year, when I was attempting to befool myself that I was bicycling right through the heart of China, when really I was walking across it, I went slam-bang across this region that is ultimately to be part of her Majesty's dominions.

One afternoon, I was strolling through the crowded, higgledy-piggledy, noisy, dirty streets of Yunnan-sen, arousing derision from the mob at my tight-fitting cycling-clothes, and striking terror into the hearts of all the little pig-tailed boys with my straggling red beard, when in a curiosity-shop—for I have always had a keen scent for curios—I actually found for sale a half-crown piece. I turned it over with a smile, for the sight was like a picture of home. "This is a curious thing," I said. "Yes, it is," said the long-fanged old heathen who wanted to sell it. "Who is that?" I asked, pointing to the figure of the Queen. "I don't know," answered the dealer, "but I've been told it's the Queen of a far-off country where there are only women."

He was pretty ignorant, was that Chinaman, but he was no more ignorant than other future subjects of her Majesty that I came in contact with. A Chinaman has the conceit of a newly made alderman.

PLAYBOY: Will we be able to find any deep meaning or fulfillment, either as individuals or as a species, as long as we continue to live with the knowledge that all human life could be snuffed out at any moment in a nuclear catastrophe? KUBRICK: We must, for in the final analysis, there may be no sound way to eliminate the threat of self-extinction without changing human nature: even if you managed to get every country disarmed down to the bow and arrow, you would still be unable to lobotomize either the knowledge of how to build nuclear warheads or the perversity that allows us to rationalize their use. Given these two categorical imperatives in a disarmed world, the first country to amass even a few weapons would have a great incentive to use them quickly. So an argument might be made that there is a greater chance for some use of nuclear weapons in a totally disarmed world, though less chance of global extinction; while in a world armed to the teeth, you have less chance for some use—but a great chance of extinction if they're used.

If you try to remove yourself from an earthly perspective and look at this tragic paradox with the detachment of an extraterrestrial, the whole thing is totally irrational. Man now has the power in one mad, incandescent moment, as you point out, to exterminate the entire species; our own generation could be the last on earth. One miscalculation and all the achievements of history could vanish in a mushroom cloud; one misstep and all of man's aspirations and strivings over the millennia could be terminated. One short circuit in a computer, one lunatic in a command structure and we could negate the heritage of the billions who have died since the dawn of man and abort the promise of the billions yet unborn—the ultimate genocide. What an irony that the discovery of nuclear power, with its potential for annihilation, also constitutes the first tottering step into the universe that must be taken by all intelligent worlds. Unhappily, the infant-mortality rate among emerging civilizations in the cosmos may be very high. Not that it will matter except to us: the destruction of this planet would have no significance on a cosmic scale; to an observer in the Andromeda nebulae, the sign of our extinction would be no more than a match flaring for a second in the heavens; and if that match does blaze in the darkness, there will be none to mourn a race that used a power that could have lit a beacon in the stars to light its funeral pyre. The choice is ours.

"I Speak... for the Dignity of Man"

... This dignity cannot be found in a man's possessions. It cannot be found in his power or in his position. It really rests on his right to be treated as a man equal in opportunity to all others. It says that he shall share in freedom, he shall choose his leaders, educate his children, provide for his family according to his ability and his merits as a human being. To apply any other test—to deny a man his hope because of his color or race, his religion, or the place of his birth—is not to deny America."

President Lyndon B. Johnson address to a joint session of Congress, March 15, 1965.

We were fashioned to live in Paradise, and Paradise was destined to serve us. Our destiny has been altered; that this has also happened with the destiny of Paradise is not stated.
